

Some properties of space-time fractional stochastic partial differential equations

Abstract

The main point of this talk is to show how the presence of the non-locality affects the behaviour of solutions to the stochastic heat equation. We will look at equations with fractional Laplacian as well as equations with time fractional derivatives. The properties discussed are closely related to the concept of ‘intermittency’ which roughly speaking, means that the solution develop high peaks.